This children’s story looks at the longing we all have to find a place of our own, where we are accepted and appreciated.

It will be read to every semester of my Children’s-Lit class.

About the Author and Illustrator

Scott Robert Dawson has worked as a technical writer and in a print shop. But beyond that, he’s drawn for years, studied animation at Sheridan and screenwriting at LIFT. Now he creates cartoons, and is writing, illustrating, and translating children’s books, giving rise to a vast multilingual publishing empire. He listens to trance music and plays way too much Minecraft.
